

Dear Colleagues,

Welcome to the October edition of the DSA Bulletin.

It was marvellous to see everyone at Coleraine in September for what was an extremely successful conference. Thank you to all those of you whose input went into contributing to that success. Keynote speakers, presenters, panellists, chairs, University of Ulster staff, students, bloggers and of course, DFID for their generous sponsorship of the event. Many papers are now available for downloading (see below).

More excellent news arrived last week when we heard that the DSA journal, The Journal of International Development, has been accepted for coverage under the ISI Social Science Citation Index. They will start coverage with the current volume, so the first official Impact Factor will be the 2011 Impact Factor (counting citations made in 2011 to papers published in 2009 and 2010). This will be released in June 2012.

We have our Heads of Centres meeting on 22nd October. If you would like to attend, please register beforehand as places are limited. Please see the details below.

HEFCE have announced their consultation on the Research Excellence Framework for 2013. There are important considerations for development studies and we will be discussing these at length at the meeting on 22nd October. More information and links can be found under our Research News section of this bulletin.

Some interesting Study Group meetings coming up in the next few weeks. Please get in touch with the convenors if you are interested in attending. You do not need to be a member to attend the first meeting, but if you do attend any group regularly we are asking that you do join the DSA.

Conference 2010. Take a vote! Friday or Saturday?

There has been a gap in the Bulletin for a few months. Please consider the facility back on track and send in your news items. Please see the end of the bulletin for our formatting requirements. If you want to make sure your item is published you will need to adhere to these formatting protocols.

Many thanks and Best wishes,

Frances

NEWS FROM THE DSA

Annual Heads of Centres Meeting 22nd October 2009

The DSA will be holding its annual Heads of Centres Meeting on 22nd October 2009 in conjunction with the UK Collaborative for Development Sciences, who are kindly hosting the event. It will be held at the Wellcome Collection, 183 Euston Road, London and starts promptly at 10.30 with Chris Whitty, Head of Research at DFID talking on a Quality-graded Evidence Base for Research. We will then be discussing the new Research Excellence Framework in the afternoon with David Sweeney, Director of Research, Innovation and Skills from HEFCE, as well as the Journal for International Development with a speaker from Wiley-Blackwell (tbc), in the light of the recent acceptance under ISI.

If you would like to attend, please email admin@devstud.org.uk with %Heads of Centres meeting+in the subject line. More information and a more detailed agenda can be found at <http://www.devstud.org.uk/events/calendar/97>.

DSA ANNUAL CONFERENCE 2009: CURRENT CRISES AND NEW OPPORTUNITIES

Those papers we have permission to upload to the website and that have been sent in to the Secretariat are now available for downloading at http://www.devstud.org.uk/events/conference/archive/dsa_annual_conference_2009_current_crisis_and_new_opportunities-6.html.

For those who presented at the Conference and would like their paper uploaded, you can do this yourself through your My DSA Space on the website. Please download the %How To+Guide for this procedure on the new website, available at http://www.devstud.org.uk/downloads/4acb2d01c2332_how-to-conference-papers.pdf

DSA ANNUAL CONFERENCE 2010 – Friday or Saturday?

We will be shortly announcing details for the Conference next year. It will be a one day event held at Church House on either Friday 5th or Saturday 6th November.

We are asking views of those who would attend, on whether to change the day from the traditional Saturday to the Friday.

If you feel strongly, please email conference@devstud.org.uk with either Friday or Saturday in the subject line, depending on your choice. Please do not go into lengthy explanations, as the emails will not be read. simply sent straight to a specific email folder.

We will then base our choice on the day that gets the highest votes and inform everyone in November's bulletin.

CALL FOR POLICY ARENAS

Policy Arenas are a special feature of the Journal of International Development.

- They focus on particular policy debates or controversies
- They reflect a range of views on those policy debates
- They engage a policy audience, as well as an academic one
- They optimally include at least one article by someone working in the policy domain

Policy Arenas may comprise different formats, for example:

- Two-three articles with an introduction written by the guest editors (a review that engages with the literature in the area of the policy arena to introduce the debate or controversy as well as the articles).

- Two articles with differing approaches to a policy issue. more like a debate between them. which may have a short piece to introduce them.
- A single position paper that sets out the literature and debates in a balanced way to promote engagement by academics and policy makers.

Policy Arenas should be of the highest standard and are subject to double-blind peer review. Guest editing and refereeing guidelines are available.

We welcome Policy Arenas on any topic within the Aims and Scope of the journal and are also interested to have Policy Arenas that engage with the natural and social sciences in addressing development policy.

Proposals should include a title, description of the policy issue/debate to be addressed and abstracts of the articles to be included. Exploratory ideas can also be discussed.

Contact Hazel Johnson (h.e.johnson@open.ac.uk).

Sustainable Global Development Conference 2009
University of Limerick, 16th and 17th October 2009
 For information on the conference and on registration see <http://paulo.ul.ie/developmentconference2009>

Sustainable Global Development 2009 is a major international conference, supported by Irish Aid, which will be held in the University of Limerick on the 16th and 17th of October, 2009. It will include papers, symposia, educational workshops, and audio-visual presentations with presenters from Africa, Latin America, Asia, and from Europe. Key Conference Themes will include:

Education in Developing Countries and Development Education	Peace-Building and The Great Lakes Region of Africa	Governance and Legitimacy
Sustainable Healthcare Practices	Rural and Urban Sustainable Development	Risk, Accountability and Finance in Sustainable Development

Key Note Speakers: Roger Riddell, author of Does Foreign Aid Really Work? (Oxford University Press, 2007), and Ana Valadez, an indigenous rights and biodiversity campaigner and activist, formerly with Council of Traditional Indigenous Physician and Midwife Organizations of Chiapas, Mexico.

The State and the Internationalisation of Business: Is There a China or India Model? 29-30 October 2009

This is a conference announcement concerning a meeting to be held jointly between the Confucius Institute for Scotland and the University of Edinburgh Business School 29-30 October 2009, University of Edinburgh, UK

The conference seeks to answer some of the key questions about the similarities and differences in the internationalisation paths of China and India and to consider to the long term resilience of their economies. Is China developing an outward-oriented, collectivist growth strategy that is always going to be very different from India? Can this be reconciled with domestic politics? Is India's preference for a domestic-oriented, large business house-driven political economy compatible with mass democracy, increasing trade dependency and foreign direct investment? Will China and India's paths converge or diverge?

Integrating Approaches: Sustainable Livelihoods, Disaster Risk Reduction and Climate Change Adaptation

Date: Thurs, 3rd December, 2009, 10.00 – 17.00

At: NCVO, Regents Wharf, London, N1 9RL

As part of an international series, Practical Action is hosting a seminar bringing together academics, practitioners and policy-makers to explore the links between Sustainable Livelihoods Approaches (SLA) and approaches to Disaster Risk Reduction and Climate Change Adaptation.

This seminar will explore the following areas through presentations and discussion:

- What can experience with Sustainable Livelihoods Approaches teach us about strengthening resilience to disasters and climate change impacts? Gehendra Gurung (Practical Action Nepal); Jeff Woodke (Jemed, Niger)
- Policies, institutions and processes at the community, district and national level: what are the critical requirements for supporting disaster and climate resilient livelihoods?

Olivia Coghlan (DFID); Marcus Oxley (Global Civil Society Network for DR)

- Frameworks for integration: challenges and opportunities for bringing together Disaster Risk Reduction, Climate Change Adaptation, and Sustainable Livelihoods
Kath Pasteur (Practical Action); John Twigg (UCL); Tom Mitchel (IDS); Richard Ewbank (ChristianAid)

Posters are invited from practitioners, policy-makers and academics, particularly postgraduate research students, which address these questions. Full UK travel bursaries are available for the selected poster presenters.

To find out more and to participate in the seminar online discussions join the Livelihoods Seminar Group at <http://community.eldis.org/sla>.

To register, please email Katherine.pasteur@practicalaction.org.uk stating your name, job title and organisation.

COURSES

Global Development Management, Open University

Global Development Management is a modular programme with courses that can be studied individually as well as for the Certificate, Diploma and MSC in Development Management. You can study while you work, and use your own experience to enrich your studies. The programme is designed to meet the needs of development professionals and those aspiring to work in development by:

“ providing conceptual tools for understanding and interpreting the rapidly changing arenas of public action;

“ teaching key skills in the institutional development, strategic management of change, project management and evaluation.

It is relevant to those working or intending to work in governmental, multilateral, bilateral and non-governmental organisations, and the private sector.

MA in Children, Youth and International Development

This innovative interdisciplinary programme, based in the Centre for Human Geography at Brunel University, is the first in the UK to cater specifically for those working, or interested in working, in the field of children, youth and international development.

Half the world's population is under the age of twenty-five and almost 90% of these young people live in poor countries. Over the past two decades, awareness has grown of the changing conditions of young people's lives. High level responses, such as the UN Convention on the Rights of the Child (1989), have encouraged NGOs and governments working at a more local level to take onboard the needs, experiences and views of children and young people. Academic research concerning children, youth and international development has also advanced considerably in the disciplines of geography, anthropology, sociology, psychology and development studies. This research has not, until now, been widely disseminated through postgraduate taught courses in the UK.

This course is designed to equip you with the conceptual understanding and breadth of empirical knowledge that will enable you to critically evaluate policy and practice in the area of children, youth and development and give you the skills necessary to design and undertake research relating to children, youth and development. It is available full time or part time and can incorporate a short placement. Further details, are available on the Brunel website <http://www.brunel.ac.uk/courses/pg/cdata/c/children%2c+youth+and+international+development+ma>. For further information, email nicola.ansell@brunel.ac.uk.

Centre for Development Studies Swansea is pleased to offer the following one-year full-time taught postgraduate degrees. Bursaries are available for both UK and overseas students:

MSc and Diploma in Social Development Policy and Management

Social development has been the principal specialism of CDS Swansea for more than 50 years. This programme offers the opportunity to learn - from practitioners and development analysts the skills that can be transferred to social development practice across a wide-range of sectoral specialisms; and to learn how to critically evaluate and apply key social development concepts, to undertake social analysis of development contexts, and to appraise and evaluate social development programmes and interventions.

MSc and Diploma in Development and Human Rights

This programme is particularly interesting because it provides students with a unique opportunity to study human rights as an important new theme in development policy and practice and to explore the incorporation of human rights concerns in the work of foreign donors, governments and civil society organisations.

MSc and Diploma in Migration & International Development

This programme is particularly interesting because of the heightened international focus on refugees and asylum seekers, and because of the increasing concern about the developmental, demographic and economic impact of population change and of AIDS.

MSc and Diploma in Social Development & Conflict

This new programme will provide a sound theoretical and policy-oriented basis for understanding violence, conflict and conflict resolution, and the impact of conflict on international politics and sustainable development. It draws on a multi-disciplinary knowledge base and presents case study material from Sub-Saharan Africa, Asia and Central and Latin America.

MSc and Diploma in Social Development & Communication

The programme is aimed at current and prospective journalists, campaigners, media professionals and development practitioners who want to deepen their knowledge of, and practical skills in, international development issues and in media and communications.

For more information, please contact Mrs Sandra Kramcha, Recruitment & Marketing Officer, School of the Environment & Society, Swansea University. Email: s.kramcha@swansea.ac.uk

MA Science, Society and Development

Join IDS at the University of Sussex and study at one of the world's leading organisations for research, teaching and communications on international development.

What will future health and agricultural systems look like? What are the implications of global pandemics of HIV/AIDS or bird flu? Currently in its second year, this course addresses today's vital health, environment and agricultural concerns, and explores how science and technology can contribute to poverty reduction, social justice and environmental sustainability in the developing world.

The London School of Hygiene & Tropical Medicine has an internationally excellent reputation in public health and tropical medicine, is a leading postgraduate medical institution in Europe and is Britain's national school of public health. It is a major national and international focus of collaboration in teaching and research, where clinical, population, laboratory and social sciences are integrated to address the broad issues of health. The School is now accepting applications for 2009.

Programmes of Study offered:

Masters Degrees

MPhil/ PhD

Doctor of Public Health (DrPH)

Short courses, Continuing Professional Development courses and MSc modules

www.lshtm.ac.uk/prospectus

The 19th Global Development Course will be held from 2nd to 14th November. The Course has been held three times a year since 2003 and is designed to provide the basic framework for understanding the context and the challenges of world economic and social development particularly as it affects the Third World, the South.

The course is held over two weeks, with sessions of two hours each evening and 2 sessions on each of the two Saturdays, providing 24 hours during which we explore issues of health, microfinance and global finance, migration and refugees, world aid and the UN system, industrial development and the environment, human rights, education, and other major areas. All the speakers are specialists in their own spheres.

The courses have been well attended by people of all ages, from teachers of geography to prospective university graduates, from some who have no previous knowledge of any of the fields to people who are anticipating a change of career. The participants have included staff of all the major development agencies - from Save the Children and OXFAM to CAFOD and Tearfund, as well as staff from the Department for International Development and the Houses of Parliament. Groups are restricted to 25 people to ensure maximum benefit.

We would appreciate it if you inform others who might be interested in taking part. Further information and an application form can be found on the website <http://www.ethical-events.org/>

Jobs and Opportunities

The School of International Development at the University of East Anglia is making up to four academic appointments to strengthen work in six key research areas (business, accountability, regulation and development; behavioural/experimental economics; climate and environmental change; health economics, social epidemiology and health policy; livelihoods, migration and social protection; and social identities, wellbeing and social justice). Other research and regional interests (e.g. Latin America, China) are welcome for the posts. Key responsibilities are to teach and direct at undergraduate and postgraduate levels and be research active, including the recruitment and supervision of doctoral research students. See the School's website www.uea.ac.uk/dev and the University's website for more details <http://www.uea.ac.uk/hr/jobs/acad/atr837.htm>

African Economic Outlook online platform

www.AfricanEconomicOutlook.org is an online tool that puts rigorous economic data, information and research on Africa at your fingertips. Comprehensive analyses of African economies, placed in their social and political contexts, are now just a few clicks away. In addition to country profiles, this platform provides ongoing research by partner institutions (AfDB and UNECA) and African think tanks, trends and analysis of sectors critical for development. Whether you are interested in macroeconomic developments, structural issues, governance, human development or just the raw figures, it is all here. AfricanEconomicOutlook.org data, analyses and forecasts are displayed in a user-friendly manner, while remaining accessible through lower-band or mobile connections. Developed using Open Source software, the databases can be searched, GIS-mapped, downloaded, plotted and printed.

- SA members can publicise non-commercial events, publications and other news through this bulletin and the DSA website free of charge. Copy deadline 10th of each month to admin@devstud.org.uk
- If you are not a member of the DSA but would like to advertise an event or resource through the bulletin there are (really quite low!) charges. Contact Frances Hill for more details.
- This bulletin reaches over 6000 people, with a conservative estimate of wider readership at around 10,000 - all interested in development. It therefore represents an ideal vehicle for members to publicise opportunities such as jobs, studentships, research etc.
- Do pass it on to colleagues or others you feel it would be of interest to.

IMPORTANT - Submitting entries to the Bulletin

Members of the DSA can publicise events, workshops, lectures, research findings, jobs, opportunities such as grants, scholarships etc, via the DSA's monthly Bulletin.

To ensure your entry gets published, please follow the guidelines below:

- Copy Deadline - 10th of each month
